

A data processing method comprising the steps of inputting a plurality of object data, encrypting at least a predetermined portion of the object data using first key data to produce encrypted object data, generating seed information which allows the first key data to be obtained therefrom, multiplexing the plurality of object data and the encrypted object data to generate a data stream, and individually transmitting the seed information and the data stream.